

Community Organizing for Climate Justice and Faith in Action
Course Objectives
Spring Semester 2025

By the end of the course students will be able to the following with some proficiency:

- Identify climate justice issues within one's context, their related systemic root causes, and climate resiliency needs within their local community.
- Understand the intersection between climate justice and racial justice and how community organizers are integrating these concepts into their campaigns.
- Center climate justice in their theological framework.
- Build a set of community organizing skills for engagement in their community. [examples: relational meetings, building a team, power mapping]
- Construct a project proposal that requires collective decision making and action, utilizes community organizing praxes, and addresses the realities of climate change.
- Expand connection to the larger community of climate and faith-based organizing.
- Know how to continue to develop their proficiency with these skills beyond the course.