

Integrative Project Reflection

Learning from Your Work in Climate Justice and Sharing its Beauty and Goodness

This reflection on your integrative project has three purposes:

- To crystalize and make conscious your own learning and growth gained by doing this project.
- To make it available as a resource for others. Sarah Berg will get your approval before publishing articles that refer to this project or before sharing quotes from this reflection. As any such articles could be useful for you in future settings, if you want certain aspects of your project highlighted let her know. If you prefer that no material from this reflection is shared, then please alert Sarah Berg to that fact and we will honor it.
- To document your project's completion.

Please send this reflection form and any material product (e.g. paper, curriculum, powerpoint, photos, etc.) to Dr. Moe-Lobeda and Sarah Berg by the end of the semester in which your project was accomplished.

Title:

Type of project (e.g. a curriculum on food justice, a congregational retreat, a paper for a class, etc):

Academic Context (e.g. a class project, an internship project, an MIC project, etc):

Ministerial Context if relevant (e.g. name and location of congregation or agency):

Brief Description of Project including purpose, process, other descriptive factors, etc.:

Reflection on Learning and Growth:

- what you learned about yourself
- what you learned about the work of climate justice
- what else you learned
- how this project was informed by or otherwise relates to coursework and other activities in the Concentration